STILL IN THE ARMY.

The fact that Theodore Roosevelt is the highest ex-president the country ever saw is not to be denied. Out of office he is not with him being out of business. He compares it to getting back into the ranks—he is still in the army with the workers and loves the work which falls to active citizenship.

Just now he is busy getting ready for his African tour and a few months active out of door life as a faunal-naturalist, during which time he hopes to procure specimens which will enrich the collection of the Smithsonian Institute, will be a joy to him.

Professor Starr of Chicago feels alarmed lest the inexperience of Roosevelt in African travel and unfamiliarity with the perils of the country he proposes to visit may result in his loss, but it is not likely that he is without the best of advisers and the most experienced hunters of the day. There is nothing foolhardy about his undertaking. It is a great exploit, in keeping with the ambition of such a hardened and strenuous citizen. He not only has his plans well laid out and his purposes well in hand, but he is resolved to accomplish them.

While he cannot entirely free himself from the press gainsayers in the office of president, he goes abroad as an unassuming citizen and declines to accept any attentions which would not be accorded any distinguished American.

Theodore Roosevelt is an object lesson. He is free from vanity and is not puffed up by his past honors. He has high ideals and abundant common sense, and is destined to show the world what a great American is!

TAFT PAYS DEFERENCE TO AGE

The evidence is complete that President Taft believes in "young men for war and old men for counsel." The only man in the president's cabinet who is under fifty is Frank Hitchcock, who at forty-two has demonstrated his great ability and mature judgment.

The secretary of agriculture is the mentor, but bears his seventy-four years with an ease that must make him an object of envy to unofficial farmers. Mr. MacVeagh graduated from Yale when President Taft was five years old. Mr. Nagel is sixty. Mr. Taft is younger than the majority of his advisers, being in his fifty-second year. He is two years the junior of his vice president.

The Boston Transcript, commenting upon this, says:

"Such differences in age between presidents and their cabinet leaders and vice presidents have been not uncommon. Often cabinets have been recruited from older, if not better, soldiers, and the vice president has been the solace for an ambitious soldier, continued as to be almost venerable. The administration ought to be learned, for the president, vice president and every member of the cabinet are college graduates. Mr. Nagel, holding a foreign degree as well. Mr. Nagel has, moreover, in his time filled a professional chair."

OPTIONAL EXECUTIONS.

The element in Massachusetts opposed to capital punishment have made an able and persistent fight for its abolishment and at last have been favored with a favorable report by the judicial committee, who stand 11 to 6 in favor of the bill permitting a jury in capital cases to add to their verdict "without capital punishment."

This is regarded as a victory by those who favor executions for capital crimes and a battle royal is likely over this issue. The opponents to this concession are already saying that "it gives to them a judicial authority which very few juries have ever good their intentions, are qualified to exercise wisely; and even should they be inclined to exercise their right to withhold that merciful clause in the case of a particularly heinous crime, they would be likely to shrink from a responsibility made all the greater by the power of choice given them."

An optional method has attained in this state through the second degree law which makes the punishment imprisonment for life. The evidence of deliberate, premeditated murder makes no difference in the finding of the jury. As a rule, Connecticut juries are opposed to hanging and they evade it by returning second degree verdicts. It would be better to have the law at the case than to have the verdict mislead it, as is often the case here.

"HELL—WHERE IS IT?"

This is a topic Evangelist C. H. Reimann of Middletown likes to catch the eye and interest the public. It is a subject in which there is a wide difference of opinion upon it.

A seemingly straight answer would be that hell is where heaven is not. In the intrusive purgatory did not come between.

A Fairfield county politician, who came to Norwich and had a frolic with the boys, in an address some time after he arrived home, told his constituents that hell was within three miles of Norwich, but he never revealed the personal experience upon which he based his conclusion.

Since science has told us so much about the earth's interior and the darkness and frigidity of space, the idea that hell is beneath our feet and heaven amid the stars has faded from many minds.

The One said: "Heaven is within you," could have located hell with equal straightforwardness by saying the same of hell. If it is righteousness which produces heavenly conditions it is certainly righteousness which produces the opposite conditions, and it may not be amiss to remark that hell may be self-made or home-made.

"When it comes to diabolical conditions we can all agree," we would say. When it comes to recognizing Hades as a place we have no particular disagreement with those who believe it is the grave, but those who are trying to give it a geographical location do not appear to succeed in furnishing a map with the latitude and longitude laid out upon it so that the location may be made exact.

The way of wickedness is the way to hell, and it doesn't make much difference as to the whereabouts of it.

WONDERS—HORTICULTURAL AND FINANCIAL.

Luther Burbank, the alleged horticultural wizard, has been incorporated and capitalized for some millions of dollars and now becomes a miracle worker in finance. One of the season's specialties that is being promoted to the ultimate sorrow of the public—is a shrub called "The Wonder Berry." Dependable authorities say unqualifiedly that the real wonder is that anybody should buy the thing, as it comes with a price tag which is a true of most of the Burbank creations. Their great merit is all in the advertising. Mr. Burbank has done some good work, but he is probably the most over-rated man in the country today. We have tried personally about all of his "wonders" that can be grown outside of tropical regions, and with one or two exceptions have found them useless. Expert horticulturists the country over give the same verdict. "The Wonder Berry" belongs in the class with "Miracle Wheat," the "Rocky Mountain Cherry," and similar creations. Those who do not buy these things are the happiest.

We remind the creature that the lesson of the busy little bee is—not to get stung—Bristol Press.

Well said, brother, well said. We have tried some of the Burbank products and because we expected too much were disappointed. The hundreds of expert horticultural experimenters in this country who are accomplishing things. Since Burbank has been commercialized anything with his name on it goes, and if it does not succeed with you, it is your fault, not his. Burbank is a wonder, and he has accomplished much, but those who do not get stung by his boomers are the ones who are blind and deaf to their pretences.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Washington municipal lodging house is said to be an ill-ventilated and perilous place.

The souvenir hunters are the shame of every country, and they are the only ones who do not know it.

Northern Canada has had eleven feet of snow the past winter and the snowstorms are not all counted yet.

The reason some magazine advertisements pay is because they are the most interesting matter in the periodical.

The average woman is being talked of in the papers, but she is just as difficult to identify as the average man.

The report is that Atlanta, Ga., stood for prohibition last year just long enough to have its photograph taken.

The New Hampshire legislature led all the other assemblies of New England by sending formal congratulations to President Taft.

Attention is called to the fact that the Taft expletive "Durn" needs only a little change to make it more common and more emphatic.

Happy thought for today: The man who passes out good advice to his neighbors is often thought of as a nuisance than a good man.

The papers out of Connecticut are now saying that the resignation of Chief Moore of the weather bureau would appear to be in order.

A Massachusetts man who drank ten cocktails in fifteen minutes was barely saved. Now he knows that more than an ass can stand.

Since it is authoritatively announced that corsets are to be longer than ever this year, the inquiry "How can they be?" appears to be in order.

Some brute of a man says that the money saved from absence from amusements during Lent is generally swamped in the new Easter hats.

Now that another Indiana county has gone dry, inquiry is being made at how many counties there are. More than there are in all New England, without doubt.

Those who were gladdest when Roosevelt went out were no gladder than he over the event. He had had a very good time, and has a corking good time before him.

The fact that the president of the New England baseball league has had 22 applications for the position of umpire is taken as evidence that the brave men are not all dead.

It worries a congressman in this country as much to think that a secret service man may be looking into his methods as it does a member of the Russian duma to go to prison.

Congressman Hobson has a great deal to fear for a man of courage. Now he fears that his vote in the Brownville case will defeat him. Perhaps the Southerners, as well as the Japs, are not all dead.

THE BULLETIN'S DAILY STORY

GOOD TO HIM.

"Are you expecting company to-night?" asked the married man, slipping his coffee critically, as was his wont.

The man's wife smiled. "At last!" she said. "I was beginning to think you weren't going to notice it. Do you like it?"

"Oh, right, I suppose," admitted the married man, grudgingly. "What did it cost?" I thought you said you were going to economize."

"The man's wife laughed. 'I knew you wouldn't recognize it,' she said. 'My dear, that dress is five years old. I was wearing it when I was a girl, and I ran across it, and I thought that with a little alteration in the sleeves I could make it do very nicely for even-ings when we were alone. It cost me two spoons of silk thread and the buttons on the front.'

"For you, my dear," answered the man's wife, brightly. "I wanted you to admire me, do you?"

"Immensely," said the man. "But of your style of hair-dressing I think that's the worst. It always reminds me of one of those Japanese straw porch pads. You're wearing your rings, too. I'll bet you are expecting somebody, and I want to tell you that if it's the Grangers and you are planning to rope me in to play bridge, you are going to be fooled. I'm going to have an engagement downtown. What is this?"

"What do you think it is?" asked the man's wife as she struck a match on the heel of her shoe and applied it to the cigar she had placed in her husband's mouth. "I concluded that I'm going to let you smoke with your coffee if you want to. As long as I'm here, I don't mind. You look a little tired, dear. Did you have a hard day?"

"Not especially," replied her husband.
